'School impact district' plan advances

By Associated Press

HONOLULU (AP) — A state Board of Education commi has approved a plan to establish Hawaii's first "school impact district" on the Big Island.

The plan developed by the Department of Education c for assessing a fee for anyone building a home from roughly Kealahou and Waimea.

A 2007 law requires the board to establish impact fee districts where projected school enrollment growth wi create the need for new or expanded schools in the n 25 years.

The DOE estimates the fee would be between $3,000 $5,000 per single-family home and between $2,000 a $3,000 per multifamily unit.

The fees would be a prerequisite to getting a county building permit.
