Impact fees playing role in city growth

By ANDREW BRANCA Daily Light staff writer

Published: Sunday, May 9, 2010 1:01 AM CDT

Impact fees play a large part in the growth, development and future of a city. These fees help to pay for the future expansion of water and waste water lines and construction of the proper infrastructure by increasing the capacity on roads as necessary. Impact fees are levied by the city and imposed on developers and builders.

The city of Waxahachie adopted a water and wastewater impact fee in 2001, updating those fees in 2008 along with adopting impact fees for roadways.
